BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY, May 18.

The various private bills were read in the different orders.

Counsel were called to the bar on the Scotch Appeal, Mitchell against the Heritors of Tingwall, &c. when the Lord Advocate was heard on the part of the respondents. Ordered to proceed on Friday next.

REPEAL OF RELIGIOUS STATUTES.

The order of the day being read, Earl Stanhope rose, and commenced a speech of considerable length, by observing, that their Lordships must recollect that during the consideration of the late Regency Bill, he had endeavoured to draw their Lordships attention to the number of absurd and vexatious acts now in being respecting religion, which were a disgrace to our Statute Books, and he had at that time intimated his intention of introducing a bill this session to remove the evil; in conformity therefore to that intimation, he should now submit one to their consideration, and although he found it necessary to trouble their Lordships with some few reasons in support of his measure, yet he should not take notice of more than one tenth part of those shameful and disgraceful acts, convinced that one tenth part would have sufficient weight to answer his purpose. The first he should mention was the 6th of Elizabeth, wherein it was enacted, that any person abtaining from church on any Sunday or holiday, should pay the penalty of twelve pence. He took notice of this act because it was upon this all the other infamous ones were framed; the sum, their Lordships must perceive, was not the object of his objection: it was the principle, which he could term nothing less than a clear and decided robbery; for there were numbers of persons, whose religious principles taught them to abstain from church, and the act of Toleration did not protect the dissenters in this particular; and these persons, for acting uprightly, and agreeable to their consciences, were to be deprived of their property.
This sum, however, was thought too trifling, and therefore, by the 23d of Elizabeth, it was extended to 20l. for keeping away one month, or on not paying the fine, to suffer three months imprisonment; to remark upon this, he considered as entirely needless, as numberless cases, by which such absence might happen, mult crowd upon their Lordships' minds; yet there was one so very forcible, he could not forbear repeating it;—it was in Christ's Sermon on the Mount; and in the sixth Chapter of St. Matthew, it would be found our Saviour made use of these words, "And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the "hypocrites are; for they love to pray, standing in the synagogues; and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily, I say unto you, that they have their reward. But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray unto thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly." Here there was a clear position laid down, and yet any man, for preferring to act according to the words of Christ, was to be subject to a penalty, or, not having it in his power to pay, was to be dragged to prison like a common fellon; but, as if this was not sufficient, in the 3d of James the First, a new act was passed, which gave power to refuse the twenty pounds, if tendered, and to seize on two thirds of all their estates and heredi-taments; and moreover, this did not depend upon the parties themselves, but was extended to their fervants, visitors, and even visitors' servants, so that in fact, a person was subject to a fine for the conduct of others over whom he had no controul; and what made this matter still worse, the information might be laid by any person, in any place, so that for instance, a man might be informed against, whether true or not, in Northamptonshire, for staying from the church in January, in Middlesex for February, in Carmarthen for March, and so on, by which means he would be ruined by being harrassed from place to place. To the acts of this kind might be added, those laws respecting fast days; by these no animal food was to be made use of on certain days, (without permission indeed of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was empowered to grant licences,) upon pain of excommunication, the effects of which were dreadful; those licences, however, were restricted, and could not be granted for year in certain months, nor for beef at any time in the year—these laws were in general looked upon as framed upon religious principles, but he could assure their Lordships it was no such thing, as the bill itself expressly avowed it was founded on political motives. Another act was to be found in our statute-books, no less absurd than many of the others, in which the marrying of two women, or one widow, was declared to be bigamy, and the party to suffer death, without the benefit of clergy. This had been jocosely termed by the Templars of the time, an act to reduce the widows to short commons. To take as a passenger any young woman, or boys, excepting those belonging to the ship, out of the kingdom, was punishable with the loss of ship and tackle. England, in former times, had certainly boasted of very great and able statesmen, but there was such a jumble of heterogeneous matter introduced into their laws, as was almost incredible; but this might indeed be in some measure accounted for, when it was considered an act of Edward the Sixth granted certain privileges to the members of that House, even though they could not read. A law had also been framed, and which would be found now in being, which rendered of Commons, Peers of Ireland, and Scotch Peers, to take certain oaths in their proper places, previous to their going to Court, or on default to be considered and dealt with as Popish Recusants; now he believed this was an act with which very few of their Lordships would be found to have complied, because it was not the custom to attend the Leves previous to taking the oaths and sew; nay, he doubted not whether the whole bench of Bishops were not in this predicament, and had he possessed any doubts of the support of the venerable bench, he could certainly have got rid of them at once. His Lordship took an extensive view of the canon law, and pointed out its ab-surdities and cruel enactments in a variety of instances, but said it gave him great pleasure to remind their Lordships, it did not affect the laity, it having been so decided in the Court of King's Bench; nor did it give him less pleasure to assure the Noble Prelates, that in his opinion it did not affect them either, as King James, upon the ratification of those laws, had declared he did it by the authority of an act of Henry VIII. and it would be found, on turning to that act, it was only to ratify the canon laws then in being, and gave no powers to form new ones.—His Lordship then introduced his bill, and referred to the particular clauses, which went in fact to repeal the effects of those acts above alluded to, leaving the laws respecting Catholics and Dissenters as they stand at present; this he did not from any conviction of their propriety, but considering them as unconnected with his present propositions.—He only asked the same indulgence for the Protestants in this country, which, by the Commercial Treaty, they were allowed in France, and French subjects received here.—In the course of his speech his Lordship paid a very high compliment to the Bishop of London, for his sentiments contained in a letter to the clergy of that dioccese, and concluded, by observing, that he might perhaps hear the same arguments made use of, as the Metropolitan had done when he alluded to this business before;—that these acts were out of date; had not been heard of these hundred years, and that the clergy never made use of them. This he thought wrong in principle, in law, and in fact; in principle, because they were in force, and might be made use of; in law, because the interference of the clergy was not necessary to put them in practice; and in fact, because he then had in his hand near thirty cases which had occurred within six and twenty years, and one of them within twelve months. He might be condemned for not having gone far enough, but he defied any person to say he had asked too much. He was, however, satisfied with the liberality of their Lordships—and by way of submitting it to their wisdom, he should first move that it be read a first time, and then that it be printed for the use of their Lordships, when they would do with it just as they thought proper.

His Lordship's motions were then put and agreed to, nem. diss.

NORTHUMBERLAND FISHERY BILL.

Lord Hawke, with a very short preface, moved, that this bill be now read a second time.

Lord Thurlow thought there was much exception to the plan for regulating who were to become the proprietors, and without some clause being introduced more explicitly he should oppose it as a fraud upon the public.

Lord Hawke wished for it only to go into a Committee, where it might meet those alterations which were thought necessary.

The bill was then read a second time, and ordered to a Committee. Adjourned.

French King is to furnish him 30,000 men, or an equivalent in money on demand. And in case the French King is attacked, the Emperor is to furnish the like succours.

IV. The King of Spain agrees, on his part, to the aforesaid third article, which the Emperor also does towards the King of Spain.

V. If the Emperors of Russia should be attacked in the present war with the Turks, his Most Christian Majesty engages to assist her with eight ships of the line, and six frigates: and his Catholic Majesty is to furnish the like succours. The Emperors of Russia binding herself to furnish either or both powers with an equal assistance, in case any attack is made on them.

VI. The Treaty of Commerce between France and Russia, made in 1787, shall be in full force, and a similar treaty be signed by Russia and Spain.

VII. The Treaty of 1761, between France and Spain, to be in full force.

VIII. Though this Treaty is to be purely defensive, the parties agree, that if any of them are attacked, the other three shall not make peace, until the province, which is invaded, is restored back in the same state it was before attacked.

IX. Whenever any of the parties shall, by their Ambassadors, demand stipulated succours, the said Ambassadors shall be reciprocally admitted into the Councils of War, and deliberate upon, and settle whatever may be most advantageous to the four Contracting Parties, and the auxiliary succours are to be augmented as events may require.

X. The High Contracting Parties shall have liberty to invoke such other Powers to accede to the present Treaty, as they may think proper.

XI. Denmark, as an ally of Russia, shall be specially invited to accede thereto.

The following is the manner in which the Emperor of Germany now disposes of his time:—He wakes early in the morning; but, to comply with the advice of the Faculty, he does not rise: he immediately takes the medicines prescribed for him. At seven o'clock, his secretary waits upon him at his bedside, and reads the different dispatches received the preceding day. His Majesty dictates the answers, and signs them. All this he does in bed. He then breakfasts. At ten he dresses, gives audiences to his ministers, his generals, &c. He dines at one o'clock, and admits a short visit from his nephew Archduke Francis, and the Archduchess his consort. He afterwards takes the air in the balcony before his apartments, and throws himself to the public. At night he takes a little light broth, and by nine o'clock he is in bed.

The unexpected death of the Ottoman Emperor has put an end to all the sanguine hopes which the mediating powers entertained of a cessation of hostilities between the three Imperial Crowns.

The Sultan Abdal Hamid was the only person in his Council who wished for peace. It was with reluctance that he engaged in the war, which he would have carefully avoided, had he not been in some degree forced into it by the apprehension of a popular tumult, and a consequent revolution. For the people called loudly for a declaration of war against Russia, and went so far as to threaten to depose the Emperor, if he continued to resist the public wish on this head.

The late Sultan of Constantinople is supposed to have been poisoned by the party in favour of the war with Russia. But though it is generally understood, that this shocking step was taken in order to make way for the advancement of Sultan Selim to the throne, because he was known to be against a peace with Russia, until the Crimea should have been recovered from her, not the most distant suspicion has been entertained that this young prince had the smallest share in this murder. He was treated by his late uncle with the tenderness of a parent, and experienced at his hands indulgences and privileges never before enjoyed by the nephew or brother of an Emperor of the Turks. Prince Selim made such a return to his uncle as the most indulgent father could expect from the most grateful and affectionate son.

An account was received in town on Monday, from Nassau, New Providence, that the sloop Elizabeth, from Exuma for New York, was sunk on the evening of the 2d of February in consequence of a stroke from a whale; of which fact oath had been made by three of the mariners.

General Meadows landed at Bombay the 6th of September last. The General was saluted on his arrival by the guns at the Castle, and the troops were all drawn up on the Parade, which he reviewed. His Excellency was afterwards conducted to the Council House, and took the oaths and his seat at the Board.

The General's stay at Bombay is supposed to be of a short duration, as it is reported he went out under a promise of succeeding to the Government of Madras, which may now be considered vacant, as Sir Archibald Campbell is on his passage home.

The Ahly Cattle East Indianman was to be dispatched from Bengal for Fort Marlborough the 30th of December last.

Lately was married, at Bengal, in the East Indies, Captain Mercer to Miss Forbes.

The Abbe Beauchamp, who has demonstrated the law which regulates all the heavenly bodies, and who is now at Bagdad, in Asia, has perceived Mercury to be nearer the Sun than he was ever seen before; and, according to a letter written to a French nobleman, this great astronomer has hopes of seeing this same planet still nearer. The Abbe is in the climate where astronomy was discovered and studied in the early ages. It is this illustrious character, who, treating of the sublime science, says, "It was a savage who first observed the heavenly motions in Syria, where the stars are constantly seen." The Abbe is forming a new set of astronomical tables.

A fraud, or rather robbery, of the basest and most dangerous kind, took place last week on the Royal Exchange, which has greatly alarmed the merchants, brokers, and bill-holders. An Italian, from Holland, and supposed to be a man of great property, came some time ago from Amsterdam, with recommended letters from his friends, and it is said he had credit on a very capital Jew house in Crutched-friars, for 10,000 l. The business of the true son of Aaron here, was to take bills, and remit them to Amsterdam. The nature and usage of that business is this: the broker, when he has bills to remit, applies to Jews and others, to remit them to their correspondents abroad; they receive the bills one post day, and the amount is paid for the next. Accordingly, last Friday week, he received very near the sum of 10,000 l. in bills on sight on Amsterdam: the very next day a letter comes from his friends abroad, stating their withdrawing their credit on the great house in Crutched-friars. When the Tuesday came, which is the next post day, he was applied to for the money: He protested one solitary 20 l. bank note, with his furniture, was all he had in the world. An express was sent to Harwich, and a messenger to Amsterdam; but as the bills were on sight, there is no doubt of their being accepted and paid long before this time. It is supposed to be a concerted plan between him and his brethren in Holland. None of the property is likely to be paid.

On Sunday evening, the 12th inst. at seven o'clock, William Aspinall, a noted walker, set out from Poppleton in Yorkshire, with a letter to Mr. Hall, of Clerkenwell Green, where he arrived on the Wednesday following, at four o'clock in the afternoon; after taking a little refreshment, and resting two hours, he set out on his return: he is to perform his journey in six days, from the time he set out from Poppleton, for a trifling sum of money; the number of miles are 150, and though he is above 40 years of age, it is believed he could perform the journey in five days with great ease.

Football.—Wednesday morning an extraordinary match of football took place at Dumfries-downs; a young gentleman took the hill for 200 guineas, against eleven of the best football players in the country, which was decided in his favour, after a contest of four hours and a half.

EDINBURGH.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

When our last went to press, the Assembly was left in debate, upon the proper mode of filling up the office of their principal Clerk, vacant by the death of Dr Drysdale; one party contending, that the House ought to proceed to the election of a Clerk immediately; and the other, that such election would not be gone into, till the several commissions, giving each member a title to vote, were examined, in order to ascertain their validity; or till a declaration was made by the Assembly, that every vote should be struck off, where the commission happened not to be submitted, upon an after scrutiny applicable to the present question.

The Rev. Dr Grieve moved, and was seconded, "That the General Assembly do now proceed to elect a principal Clerk of the Assembly, in the room of the late Dr Drysdale."

To which motion the following amendment was proposed by the Hon. Henry Erskine, Dean of Faculty, and seconded, "Under this motion, it should be competent to any member of this Assembly to demand a scrutiny or investigation of the legality of the votes, or any of them, given for any of the candidates; That, for this purpose, the names of all the members voting, and for whom they vote, shall be taken down; That the investigation shall be committed to the Committee for revising commissions: That the Assembly shall, at a subsequent diet, decide on their report; and that the election shall then be declared, to have taken place on the person having the majority of legal votes on the roll, as purged by the Assembly."

This amendment was contended very keenly on both sides. The Dean of Faculty, Mr Ferguson of Craigdarroch, Dr Bryce Johnstone, Mr Robert Macintosh advocate, and several other gentlemen, supported the amendment, upon the ground, that material justice required, in electing an officer of such importance as the Principal Clerk of the Church of Scotland, that no vote should be received, or, at least, not retained, which was not finally declared a good vote by the judgment of the Assembly, which judgment in this case ought to be retrospective. This justice, it was said, demanded, though strict form should be adhered to. Yet this was not the case; for such procedure was not, in fact, inconsistent with the forms of the House, but in conformance to its most approved usage; and precedents were extant precisely applicable to the present question.

It was maintained, on the other hand, by the Solicitor General, Dr Hardy, Mr George Ferguson advocate, and others, that, by the invariable usage of the Assembly, the election of a Moderator, and, in the case of vacancy, of a Clerk, were previous to every other business. Without them they were not held to be a House. It was not proposed, in the present case, to cut down the election of the Moderator, notwithstanding it should afterwards appear, when the commissions were examined, that many persons had voted without a title. Now, the same rule must apply to the Clerk. He was equally necessary to the constitution of the House as the Moderator; and the retrospective scrutiny demanded, as it was alien to the forms and precedents, so was it also pregnant with inextricable confusion to the order and proceedings of the Assembly.

After a long debate, in which these and many other topics were started and enlarged on, the Assembly agreed to put the following state of the vote, amendment, or not? It being understood, that if amendment carried, they should immediately proceed to the election of Principal Clerk, under the proviso contained in the amendment; and, if it carried not, that the amendment should be rejected.

The question being put, the Dean of Faculty's amendment was carried by a majority of 17 to 12. The House then agreed to proceed to the election of a Clerk, under the proviso of a retrospective scrutiny;—against which decision Mr Solicitor Dundas protested in his own name, and in name of all who should adhere to him.

Two candidates were put in nomination, viz. Dr Carlyle, proposed by Dr Gerard of Aberdeen, and the Solicitor General, and Professor Dalzell, proposed by Dr Bryce Johnstone and the Dean of Faculty; and the vote being put, it carried by 145 to 143 (being a majority of 2) in favour of Dr Carlyle. The Moderator being desired to declare in what manner he would give his casting vote, if, upon a scrutiny, there should appear an equality of votes, declared, that he gave his vote for Dr Carlyle.

The Dean of Faculty then moved for a Committee of Scrutiny in behalf of Professor Dalzell, and Principal Davidson made the same demand on the part of Dr Carlyle. A Committee was accordingly named, consisting of ten members on each side, together with the Moderator. After which the roll of Assembly, marked agreeable to the amendment, was sealed up, upon the motion of the Dean of Faculty, with the seals of the Moderator, Principal Macmillan, and Sir Harry Moncrieff, these two gentlemen having been requested to assist the Clerk in marking the roll, as the members voted.

Dr Carlyle addressed the Assembly in a short speech. He thanked the House for the honour they had conferred on him; declared it to be that kind of honour of which he was most desirous; professed his firm attachment to the Church of Scotland in the seasons of its greatest danger; very warmly expressed his abhorrence of faction; hoped that all those who, from peculiar motives, had on this occasion voted against him, would quickly return to their natural state; and assured them, that he was by no means offended at their conduct. The oath de fidei administrationis was administered to him, and he took his place as Clerk to the General Assembly.

No less than 287 members voted on this occasion. The Assembly consisted in all of 364; and, it is said, the greatest number ever known to have voted before this time was 221. The contest is, in a great measure, a political trial of strength between Mr Dundas and the Scottish Opposition. Both that gentleman and Mr Pitt, it is said, have personally interfered in the canvass in favour of Dr Carlyle.

Both parties, accordingly, boast of great and respectable names. Nor are the efforts of private friendship, unconnected with party motives, wanting in this struggle. The friends of Professor Dalzell still entertain great hopes, and the scrutiny is going on with much keenness.

The Assembly spent the most part of yesterday in prayer, and then appointed the following Gentlemen to preach before his Grace the Commissioner: The Rev. Mr Thomas Fleeming at Kirkcaldy, to-morrow in the forenoon; and the Rev. Mr Thomas Miller at Aberdeen in the afternoon. The Rev. Mr James Luffler at Auchtermuchty, Sunday evening, in the forenoon; and the Rev. Mr James Watson, at South Ralldy, in the afternoon.

This day, the Committee whom the General Assembly appointed to draw up an answer to his Majesty's letter, reported the same to the House, which being read over, paragraph by paragraph, was approved of, and signed by the Moderator. The same Committee reported a loyal and dutiful address to his Majesty, congratulating him on his recovery from the dangerous malady with which he had lately been afflicted; also a congratulatory address to the Queen on that happy event. These were likewise read over paragraph by paragraph, approved of; and the Moderator, in the name of the Assembly, appointed to sign them. His Grace the Commissioner was pleased to say, that he would immediately transmit the same.

When this Paper went to press, the Assembly were debating upon a protest taken, that the scrutiny agreed to, whatever way it might turn out, should not affect the patrimonial interest of Dr Carlyle. Particulars in our next.

On Thursday last, there appeared at his Grace the Commissioner's table, six dozen of high flavoured peaches, and several dishes of strawberries and green peas. They were presented to his Grace by Mr Baron Stewart, from his gardens at Moredun.

On Monday evening was married at Hall Garth, in the county of Durham, Captain Barrington Price, to Lady Maria Bowes, eldest daughter of the Earl of Strathmore.

Died yesterday, Mr James Gilchrist, third son of Mr Archibald Gilchrist, late merchant in Edinburgh. Yesterday, the 2d, or Queen's regiment of Dragoon Guards, commanded by Marquis Towallend, were reviewed on Musselburgh Links by his Excellency the Hon. Lieutenant General Leslie. They made a fine appearance, and went through their various evolutions much to the satisfaction of the reviewing General, and a genteel and numerous company of spectators.

Among the bills which received the Royal Assent by commission on Monday last, were, an act for making and repairing the road from the city of Glasgow to Muirkirk, and from thence to the confines of the county of Ayr, towards Sanquhar, and other roads communicating therewith. An act for repairing and widening the road from Grately, by Annan, Dumfries, and Sanquhar, to the confines of the county of Ayr; and the road from Corfenarget to Waulochhead. An act for repairing certain roads in the county of Perth, and for explaining and amending an act made in the 45th of his present Majesty, for repairing the highways, bridges, and ferries in the county of Perth. An act for repairing the roads in the county of Forfar, and for regulating the statute labour within the same. An act for enlarging the term and powers of several acts, in so far as relates to certain roads leading through the counties of Lanark and Renfrew.

On Tuesday morning the three companies of the City Guard were reviewed before the Magistrates on the Clifton-hill. The men now composing this corps having all been in the army, (except a very few) and the Captains having all served in the military line last war, a remarkable improvement and dexterity was observed in their manoeuvres, particularly in the regularity and exactness of their firing. The Magistrates complimented the commanding officer, and gave a handsome donation to the men for their behaviour.

The Magistrates have lately ordered the night centinels to be furnished with rattles (similar to those of the watchmen in London), in case of fire or riot, for the purpose of early assistance from the main guards.

On the 6th inst., a melancholy accident happened at Blantyre cotton-mill; a child, belonging to one of the labourers, diverting itself by the side of the river, fell in; being observed by the father, he immediately ran into the river, and, having gone beyond his depth, was unfortunately drowned: Every assistance was given, but to no purpose; the child was got out alive.

The Queen's excise revenue cutter, Capt. Falconer, has taken the Swedish frigate, of Maryport, from Oland, with 300 ankers of brandy and Geneva, 135 pipes of tobacco, and a quantity of tea, and carried her into Whitehaven the 8th inst.

Extract of a letter from Aberdeen, May 21.

The Circuit Court of Judiciary was opened here on Tuesday last, by the Right Hon. Lords Henders and Swinton, with the trial of John Stewart, alias Monro, and James Stewart at Overhill of Foveran, accused of house-breaking and theft. James Stewart was acquitted, and John Stewart alias Monro, being found guilty, was sentenced to be hanged here, on the 3d of July next.—He had formerly been found guilty of theft, whipt, and banished Scotland for life. Charles Stewart at Brucklaw, in the parish of New Deer, and county of Aberdeen, accused of the same crime with Monro, was outlawed for not appearing.

Robert Walker, at Beadon, near Aberdeen, in the parish of Nether Banchory, accused of murder, was found not guilty and acquitted.

James Gray, tinker in the Hardgate of Aberdeen, accused of celebrating a clandestine marriage, was, on his own petition, and the consent of his Majesty's Advocate Depute, banished Scotland for life, under the usual certification.

No other business depending, and this being the last day of the year, ends the Northern Circuit.

Extract of a letter from Edinburgh, May 20.

A very affecting accident happened here yesterday morning: Our fishing boats being at sea, in order to haul their lobster creels, one of them having gone too near the rocks, and the wind being northerly, with a considerable swell of the sea, the boat was overboard, and five stout young men instantly perished, leaving behind them five widows, and seventeen helpless children. What may be considered as a further aggravation of this misfortune, is, that the five poor fellows who suffered, were remarkable for industry and sobriety. The oldest fisherman here does not remember a similar accident happening to any boat belonging to this port.

These lands consist of upwards of 1200 acres, of which above 700 are arable, and the remainder excellent sheep pasture, extending for about two miles along the shore. A very beautiful and romantic road has lately been made through the rock, close by the sea, at a great expence.
